New Index-Digest
to the Central Law Journal

VOLUMES 55 TO 72 INCLUSIVE

NOW READY

Many subscribers, in fact, nearly all subscribers to the Central Law Journal, keep the bound volumes.

These subscribers have been demanding for several years, a digest to the volumes since Volume 55.

So much valuable matter is contained in these volumes that subscribers become impatient when unable to find certain articles or annotations that they wish to find.

Not a few of our subscribers have said that with a good digest, the last eighteen volumes of the Central Law Journal are more suggestive and helpful on unusual or difficult questions than any other set of books on their shelves.

The new index covers volumes 55 to 72

It sells for $3.50 delivered

STATE OF NORTH DAKOTA

SUPREME COURT

Bismarck, N. Dak., March 22, 1912.

My Dear Mr. Robbins:

I have been a reader of the Central Law Journal since 1893. It has been of great assistance to me, and I always welcome its appearance. It has occupied, and still occupies, a unique field in American legal literature, and has been, and still is, of immense value and influence. I will be glad to see its influence extended. In this age of the initiative, referendum and the recall, we need, above all, a wide diffusion of legal knowledge, and avenues where not merely court decisions may be disseminated, but legal criticism may have a free field and a wide expression.

The Central Law Journal has been wisely and ably managed and edited for many years, and is a journal which has an established place in the world of law and of government.

Very truly yours,
ANDREW A. BRUCE.

Suggestions to Subscribers

Articles like the one referred to by Judge Bruce are too valuable to throw away. They are far superior to annotations in many annotated reports and more worthy of preservation.

We suggest that every subscriber, in order to get full value from his subscription, carefully preserve his numbers and bind them.

Binders, which hold 26 issues or one volume, we sell at 50c each.

We bind single volumes in half sheep at $1.25 per volume.

Subscribers who bind their journals say that they are of the greatest value, superior to many more expensive sets on their shelves for practical purposes.
